ON THE DEATH OF PRES-IDENT JAS, A. GARFIELD

BY WM. GILL MILLS.

Toll for the dead! the illustrious dead! Toll! for our hearts are grieving now! Toll! for the bitter tears we shed!
Toll for the sorrowing heads that bow! Through earth and heaven it saith, "Oh, mourning continent, Your noble President Is sleeping now in death!"

The dastardly assassin's band With secret aim at last prevailed; For freedom, false, in freedom's land

Its representative assailed
Whole nations mourn to-day!
The monarchs' heads bow down,
Draped is the kingly crown,
And sad the poet's lay.

Beloved by all in every realm

For noble, manly vi.tues shown;
He grasped with power and skill the helm To guide the ship to glory on. He knew his country's need; He loved it more than life; And upward in the strife.

To purer heights would lead.

Brave, through the stricken hours he bent A patient lover of God's laws. May we the lessons learn,

To live upright and true; Our country's weal in view, Its love by virtue earn. Dark is that spot on our bright age
When freedom guides the sons of men;
But he will live on history's page, A humble, God-like citizen.
Such loyal hearts we need,
And millions tread our land;
Thank God! but one foul hand
Would do that murderous deed.

Their loving aid impart. Salt Lake City, Sept. 20th, 1881.

Newark: In accordance with a previous understanding a body of men met last evening at 9 oclock in a little grove on the roadside leading to Mesburn, about half a mite above Middleville. White coverings concealed the faces of these men. When all had assembled there were about fifty persons present. Two were at pointed to stand on the Macadamized road, and three others were standing of the standin mized road, and three others were sta-tioned at short distances in a neighboring tioned at short distances in a neighboring cornield. About half a mile further on stands. Melburn town, poorhouse and farm. Within a stone's throw of the site of the meeting there is a very pretty white house with vine covered latticework at the entrance and a sign with the inscription, "Beware of the Dog," coninscription, "Beware of the Dog," conspiculus on a large cherry tree. After the pic-ets had been posted roll was called by numbers. Each person in responding went forward and whispered a password to the person who acted as master of ceremonies. The numbers

tion; and,
Whereas, If the worst should occur and we are deprived of one of God's noblemen by the hand of this assassin, we will witness one of those every day scenes of a legal execution, wherein the assassins are made to appear more like a martyr.

Whereas, It has been our experience in of assassination, we deem it advisable that some more fitting example be made of one to deserving of our wrath.

Therefore, be it resolved that from among our ranks one or more shall be appointed by lot, whose duties it will be to spare neither excuse or energy to execute the orders of this body.

cute the orders of this body.

(Signed.) COMMITTER OF THREE.

In the remarks subsequent to the adoption of the above, there was but little discussion, with the exception of some remarks condemning the action of Sergeant Mason jand calling him a brungling braggart, who either sought to do what he dared not or sought public notoriety, by his rash action. The understanding was that no person would be standing was that no person would be requested to act as executioner for the council who did not deem it worthy of risking his life to make an example of all who desire to obtain notoriety at the cost of the best blood of the nation. The matter of drawing the lots was postponed until more was heard from the chamber of the suffering President.
